A large majority of people in Japan do not keep pets. This trend has only changed slightly since 2021, falling by only 2%, according to the graph. This is probably due to the number of apartment buildings that do not allow pets in Japan. There may also be financial concerns when it comes to keeping pets, since pet food and vet bills are particularly high.

Cats and dogs are the most popular pets in Japan. Dogs' popularity could be because they need to be taken for walks, which helps their human owners take exercise. In contrast, cats are also popular as they can be kept indoors and do not require walks. This makes it easier for people who work to keep them. Indeed, the other pets shown in the data, such as lizards and rodents, are also relatively easy to keep. Such pets are suitable for people with busy lives. (150 語)
